> STEAM ENGINE STILL SUPERIOR. Pennsylvania Railroad Tests Its Locomotives.

Clayton, N. J., Dec. 7. It was demonstrated here Wednesday by the speed tests of locomotives made by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, that ateam-driven engines are still superior and that they can run as fast on a curved track as on a straight track. One of the big steam locomotives in the test made, a fraction more than ninety-nine miles an hour. When the engine ended the run it was covered with snow sucked up a cloud from along the tracks.

INDIVIDUAL TASTE IN MUSIC. Largely a Matter of Tempe ament influenced by Culture.

Tasto is a matter of temperamen targely, although of course influenced by the surroundings and culture of the person, but the same scholastic course does not always produce the same result with different persons. Where individuality is well developed, everything is not taken for granted, and the molding is not so complete as in a person not so endowed. Chopin dearly loved disturbances of times, within bounds, of course, and the player must sympathize with him or else he will never play Chopin as the com-poser intended. Mendelssohn, on the contrary, could not endure much devi-ation from the exact time and after renperted in Barton and the health officers during a passage with the precision of has closed the parcelail schools as the a metronome, would call the attention cases thus far have been confined to of his class to the beauty of such a per-A special electric freight car is to be run twice daily between Rutland and New Haven and will be put on by the street railway in time for the holiday trade. Undoubtedly the lowest form of musical taste is that tickled by rapid movements and pronounced rhythm; the negro of the South illustrates this. In the spring of 1865 the writer was passing through a fine forest, one of several others," in pursuit of Lee's army, when four puntation negroes passed along the road singing "Old Hundred." The melody was carried by a god tener voice, while the other three singers imitated the instruments of a band, making a very good imitation indeed. The "taste" of these caused them to transform this

English Trainers Find Fault With the Yankee's Seat.

Richard Marsh, King Edward's trainwas an exciting scene in this harbor thursday night when the battleship Prince George broke from her moorings and went advirt. She grazed a number of warships at anchor, and then collided with such force with the new cruiser Shannon that a big hole was pierced in trol their horses behind the barrier. This is largely ascribed to the American monkey seat, which gives a jockey little chance to master his mount. Marsh says numbers of young horses are being spoiled through inability of the boys riding monkey fashion to hold them together. He contends that FOR SALE IN THE F. B. #### AN OLD PROVERB

"A Penny Saved is a Penny Earned" Is Almost Universal.

Like most of these wise old proverbs "a penny saved is a penny carned" is probably, in sime form or other, universal. In Germany there are three forms of it-"A penny saved is a penny gained" ("Ersparter Pfennig ist so gu wie orworbene").

"A penny saved is twopence got" ("Fin esparter Pfennig ist zweimal verdient") and "Penny is penny's brother" ("Pfennig ist Pfennig's Bruder"). In Spanish, "A penny spared is a penny saved" ("Quien come y dexa, dos veces pone la mesa"). In Dutch, "A penny spared is better than a floring gained." ("Fen stuives gaspared is better gained" ("Een stuiver gespaard is beter dan een gulden gewonnen"). In Danish, "A penny in time is as good as a dollar" ("En Skilling er i Tida sai god som en Daler"). In Frenca. "Saving is getting" ("Qui epargne, gagne"). Similarly in German. ("Saving ist gros-sere kunst als erwerben"). Danish. Money saved is as good as money ("Den Penge man sparer or aa god som den man ayler"). Italian "Money is money's brother" ("Il dan aro e fratello del danaro"). But money is no gain when it "advances meacocks" be many." and "Who will not keep a penny shall never have many"—he who is prodigal of little can never have a great deal.—London Notes and Queries.
